RENEWABLE ENERGY: OUTLOOK FOR THE M&A MARKET

REPORT 2022

TTR DATA

The special edition of “Renewable Energies: Perspectives of the M&A market in Spain and Portugal in 2022”, produced by TTR Data, in partnership with iDeals, sheds lights on the current situation of the energy sector in the Iberian market and its perspectives, with knowledge generated by market experts through our Roundtable section, as well as the work of legal and financial firms in mergers and acquisitions, through the publication of special legal, financial and industrial rankings in the Iberian M&A market in the renewable energy sector in 2022.

ROUNDTABLE

iDeals is pleased to host a discussion with two key players in the Iberian Renewables market: Verónica Romaní Sancho and Diego Martínez Colino from Gómez-Acebo & Pombo. Our Iberian Regional Manager, Sebastián Montoya, moderated this insightful conversation.

DIEGO MARTÍNEZ

Diego is a Senior Associate and a member of the Energy Group at Gómez-Acebo & Pombo. He has extensive experience in investment and divestment transactions related to energy and infrastructure, having advised both domestic and international top-tier clients on a recurring basis. He has been involved in a significant number of the transactional processes carried out in these sectors in recent years, although his scope of activity also includes M&A transactions in other sectors, corporate law and international trade.

VERÓNICA ROMANÍ SANCHO

Verónica is head of Energy and a Banking and Finance partner at Gómez-Acebo & Pombo. She is a member of the Board of Directors of our Firm. She has extensive experience in transactions related to energy and infrastructure, with a global profile that includes advising leading domestic and international clients on both acquisition and financing transactions of assets in regulated sectors. She has been involved in a significant number of the acquisition and financing processes that have taken place in these sectors. Her experience also includes acquisition financings, corporate finance and syndicated loans, refinancing and corporate restructuring transactions.

Sebastián Montoya: We all experienced the many challenges of 2022. What are your perspectives on renewables in Iberia in the following months of 2023?

Diego Martínez: I tend to be optimistic, so I am confident there will be new opportunities even in these uncertain times. Especially in those sectors that will underpin the society of the future, such as renewable energy, energy efficiency, hydrogen, and energy storage - these will be the most resilient.

Verónica Romaní: Agreed, and if this proves to be true, the future will see a good number of transactions and deals closed in the above areas and the blossoming of new specializations for asset managers, M&A operators, and transaction and regulatory legal advisors.

Sebastián Montoya: How does this relate to the sector's performance today?

Verónica Romaní: When it comes to energy in general and, more specifically, to renewables and alternative energy solutions, Iberia leads the way, and if we stay on track, we have the potential to become a leading European energy hub.

Diego Martínez: This will clearly have a relevant impact on market performance even in these challenging times. Both countries (Spain and Portugal) have great potential in renewables (not only in solar, wind, and hydro but also with plenty of geothermal and tidal resources), as well as having natural gas supplies from North Africa and lower electricity prices than the rest of Europe.

Sebastián Montoya: What are the key deal drivers for dealmakers and corporate executives in Renewables to watch?

Verónica Romaní: I believe that, even given the current environment, the most relevant driver is the actions of public authorities in relation to the analysis and approval of new projects. Energy, in general, is a highly regulated sector. Therefore, the appropriate approach of public bodies and the support of national and regional governments is paramount. Any delay or inefficiency on their part has a huge impact on the performance of the market itself and, more specifically, on the implementation of new projects.

Diego Martínez: Even before the existing challenges of finding efficient interest rates on financing facilities or the volatility of energy prices, bearing in mind that both factors always experience changes during the life of long-term projects such as energy projects, I would put the actions of the public sector as the main key driver for any operator in our sector.

Sebastián Montoya: Can you also comment on ESG's increasing impact?

Verónica Romaní: ESG (Environmental, Social, and Governance) has rapidly gained relevance in recent years.

Nowadays, companies are no longer adopting a merely formal approach, limited to compliance with the applicable legislation on the subject. On the contrary, they are taking much more proactive action, even restricting their business partnerships to other companies with fairly strong ESG policies.

Diego Martínez: Something similar can be said of consumers and their criteria for choosing between different companies offering similar products or services in any relevant market. Therefore, based on the feedback we receive repeatedly from our clients, one of the biggest challenges for any company in the coming years, regardless of sector or industry, will be its approach to ESG, as its performance in this area will have a critical impact on its future success.

Sebastián Montoya: Looking again to 2023, what industries will be challenged the most?

Verónica Romaní: As things stand, it is quite difficult to say what will happen in the coming months, as we have become increasingly used to seeing big changes overnight (e.g., Covid-19, the war in Ukraine, the political developments, etc.). However, suppose we assume that we can expect high inflation and low growth rates in the coming months in the Eurozone. In that case, we can guess that the industries facing the biggest challenges will be those related to general manufacturing, tourism, hospitality, or retail.

Diego Martínez: In addition, given the current geopolitical situation, other sectors with high exposure to supply chain issues (e.g., the current shortage of microchips) may also face quite difficult times.

Sebastián Montoya: We fundamentally believe that quick and precise reevaluation will be a crucial tool for executives, investors, and dealmakers moving forward. In these uncertain times, purpose-driven technology and sharp innovation can accelerate progress. Thanks again for accepting our invitation and for your valuable insights, Diego and Verónica.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Mergers and acquisitions in the renewable energy industry are at an important moment in history: although we have seen a considerable acceleration in the last two years, an atmosphere of some caution persists among investors in 2022, derived from the political and structural signals of the main economies of the region that directly affect the Iberian market.

Below, in the graphs of this report, you get an overview of the M&A market in the Spanish and Portuguese renewable energy segment, highlighting its behavior in the last 5 years, as well as a ranking of legal advisors and most active financiers in Spain's M&A market in the renewable energy sector, both by value and volume of transactions.

Data compiled by TTR Data show that the renewable energy sector in the Iberian market experienced an increase of almost 65% in 2021, but registered a drop of nearly 21% in 2022. Meanwhile, the volume of M&A in Spain's energy sector, one of the most dynamic countries in the region in that sector, grew steadily over the last four years, before declining sharply in 2022, while value added remained relatively stable.

The Russia - Ukraine conflict and the rise in energy prices in the country have caused a revolution in the M&A market in recent months. However, the dynamism of the energy sector will not rely on the macro situation, but will have long-term vision. That is, it will have an anticyclical behavior. The volatility of the exchange rate against the dollar, interest rates and the stress to the economy and the market in general are affecting the valuations of companies, so investors are placing new emphasis on profitability and cost control amid the correction happening in the public markets. However, the United States plays a relevant role in the industry and in its interest in strategic energy assets in the Iberian region.

Spain and Portugal in recent years have opted for investment in renewable energy, which should translate into greater M&A activity, as well as the development of new projects. Although opportunities are forecast in less active sectors recently such as gas or hydropower, traditional renewables, onshore wind and photovoltaic, will continue to be the focus for investors, along with new technologies, such as offshore wind, which may be one of the most active sectors in this stage in the medium and long term.

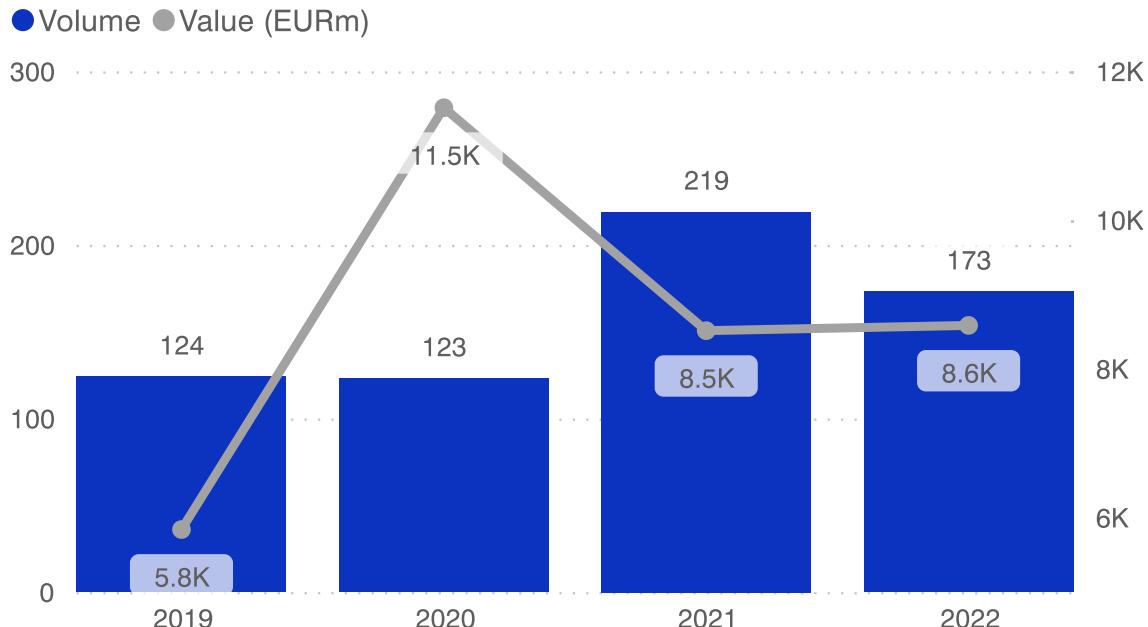

In this sense, Spain and Portugal have large companies and professionals that will boost the sector, continuing with the existing growth. For the medium term, an increase in project financing operations for the development of renewable energies is envisioned. With regards to assets in operation, there are still asset and platform purchase and sale transactions, which generally entail their corresponding refinancing.
